American College Student's Views Assessed by N. S. A. Visiting Student

Is There Too Recent Student Reality?

For most of the foreign students visiting on the American campus, the first feeling is one of being excluded. A college, an American college, is a world, an academic world, "state within the State." It has its own membership, its workers and its managers, its buildings for work, rest, entertainment, selling, and worship. I have even heard of a cemetery on a campus—and it is not time left for settling parking. The foreign student cannot help but wonder how an American college student, suddenly at graduation from this isolated world into the broader and more complex public life, can adjust seemingly without any difficulty of waste of time. But the ability of the American people to adapt themselves will always improve the samestandard thrown forward. However, not off from the outside world, the college student has little chance to live the days past struggling of his people and to share his hopes and disappointments. Likewise the outside world does not appear to call upon the student for help. As a result, the student does not seek political power; he has little confidence in his personal contribution to present problems and society seems to ignore his potential contributions. The lack of immediate economic pressure on students explains some of the lack of political action on the American campus. There is no urgent economic problem. The student finds himself in some way, always able to American students do have problems, but they are not those of students in other countries who have fought wars on their country's fund, or have sacrificed liberty, property, even life in order to preserve their right. American students are concerned about shorter reform of the educational system, academic freedom, Federal Aid programs, segregation, student participation in college policy making, and student right to teach and write upon politics on social and moral matters. But these are strictly student problems, and at most strictly academic problems.

Another reason gives by students to explain their lack of interest in political action is that they are often too young. This is obviously true.

But even when the American student does vote, there is no great demand for a political change. He is not satisfied with the results he has been given. On one hand his propensity is to demand financial aid and Federal grants; on the other hand he is not satisfied with the moral obligation to elevate his own position to the political doctrine of the nation. One is not asked to vote for a party but for a person.
ANYONE FOR FOOTBALL?

When Pancho Sigafus, sophomore, pale and sensitive, first saw Willis Ludwig, freshman, lithe as a barb wire and ready as the dash, he knew he was not fit. But there did he see. "I adore you," he said without preliminary.

"Thanks, boy," said Willis, fanning his hair over his face modestly. "What do you say?"

"Position?" said Pancho, looking at hisFanace. (The answer is a ligament just behind the ear.)

"On the football team," said Willis.

"Football!" moaned Pancho, his young lip curling. "Football is violence, and violence is the death of the mind. I am not a football player. I am a poet."

"So long, buddy," said Willis.

"What?" cried Pancho, clenching her fists in horror.

She placed a foot on his pelvis and wrung herself free. "I only go with football players," she said, walking, shivering, into the gathering dusk.

Pancho went to his room and lit a cigarette and pondered his dilemma. What kind of cigarette did Pancho light? Why, Philip Morris, of course!

Philip Morris is always welcome, but never more than when you are least in the mood. When a fellow needs a friend, when the hour is dull and the blood runs like sogum, then, above all, is the time for the muffler, the serenity, that only Philip Morris can supply.

Pancho Sigafus, his broken psyche healed, his lowered brow cooled, his energies restored, after smoking a fine Philip Morris, came, to a decision. Though he was not a little man for football (nor even four feet), and somewhat overweight (47 pounds), he tried out for the team—and tried out with both grit and gumption that he made it.

Pancho's college opened the season against the Manhattan School of Mines, always a sessional foe, but strengthened this year by four exchange students from Gibraltar, who had been snubbed by deans. By the middle of the second quarter the Miners had wrought such havoc upon Pancho's team that there was nobody left on the bench but Pancho. And when the quarter-clock was sent to the infirmary with his head driven straight down into his ephets, the coach had no choice but to put out Pancho.

Pancho's teammates were not conspicuously cheered as the little fellow took his place in the huddle.

"Gentlemen," said Pancho, "one of us may regard poetry as easy stuff, but now in our most trying hour, let us back to the drawing board. When a fellow needs a friend, when the hour is dull and the blood runs like sogum, then, above all, is the time for the muffler, the serenity, that only Philip Morris can supply.

"Yes," said one of Pancho's team, by this sly exertation that they threw themselves into the fury with utter abandon. As a consequence, Pancho's team was hospitalized before half time. The college was forced to drop football. Willis Ludwig, not having any football players to choose from, took up writing, and soon discovered the beauty of his own. Today they are seen everywhere—dancing, holding hands, nursing, smoking.

Smoking what? Philip Morris, of course!

BANTAM BANTER

Two weekend performances by Jay McWilliams' rejuvenated basketball team have given ground for the optimistic belief that this winter just might not be a long and cold one. For two years now, the only sounds emanating from the team's habitat in the distant corner of the campus have been those of reassuring hoots and the banging of football feet as they leave the stands after the evening games.

For two years now, the yearning few have been the attractions. Finally, the varsity has taken the position as the team to see. Players from the last two frosh teams which drew the crowds down to the Field House were worn of the uniforms on this 15-man 1958-59 squad.

Friday night was probably one of the most enjoyable hours Trinity has ever incurred. How can a loss be enjoyable? Well, let's start from the beginning.

As in past years, pre-seasonoud's statements and newspaper reports about the Bantams' basketball team had no air of reserved optimism. This is usually indicative of a team which expects to win no more than a handful of games, but doesn't want the school or public to think they're going to go down without a fight. A pretty good crowd shivered down to the game that night, expecting to see what may be termed a usual Trinity performance — that is, sloppy ball handling, poor rebounding, lack of hustle, and indifferent defense. But be able that addition of a half dozen new faces, and in some new spots, the boys had the new look of a pretty fair team.

In Jay Depuy, a senior who has never lived up to what was expected of him after freshman year, the team had a leader on the court. That's something we haven't had around here in a while. When the game goes tight, or play isn't being set up right, the man can't always get the team together. A player with some court sense and a head on... and Depuy did.

As the Times' Harry Ophian and Cosmo's Johnny Cuellar put it in wonderment when the locals pulled out into a six-point lead in the first half, the crowd (a big one) rose to its feet, cheering frantically. When the teams left for the dressing room at halftime, the ovation, the likes of which no veteran basketball player could remember, greeted them.

Saturday night, the squad displayed the same brand of ballplaying that just makes Trinity fans love to play. That's how the locals will be remembered here for the rest of the season. M.I.T. was the opponent. M.I.T. was the victim.

The scoring spotlight which had been shared by Jack Foster and Charlie Bergmann against Brown, now featured Soph Ron Cresswell. McWilliams has depth, as exhibited by his use of eleven players in the close game (six of them scored, as don't be surprised when you see a number of them step up this year's scoring parade.

The Trinity Cell line representation for the opener was a good one. Now that it's been proven that the shots at the Field House should be entertaining ones, why not come out for more for the Williams game next Tuesday evening?

FOOTBALL CANDIDATES

I would like to have men who are interested in coming out for 1959 varsity football team and see me at the Field House.

This request is for persons who did not participate on freshman or varsity teams in 1958.

We would like to extend this opportunity to all interested players.

FENCING LOOKS GOOD

As in past years, the Trinity fencing squad squared off against N.Y.C. and came out on the short end of a 22-5 score. Trinity had faced what influential sources call the top fencing team in the nation, with number one man Parise on the Olympic squad, the defeat failed to dim the team's hopes for a good season.

Although No. 2 man Doris, captain of the team, was the sixth-ranked swordsman in the country, and although the No. 3 man had trained in Paris, the Blue and Gold's aggressiveness prevented the New Yorkers from relaxing.

Bright spots in the Trinity's two victories for senior Nick Bouchard, one each for Senior Kimball Macintosh and Chuck Madlend with the saber, and one for fellow Pete Wary of Watertown, incidentally, upset Doris in the latter's first match of a series he's hoped to complete undefeated.

According to Coach Tom Jarrett, the squad looked as well in its first match this year, despite the loss, as it looked in any match last year.

January 10th brings a trilingual affair with M.I.T. and Synnecor at Boston. The highly-rated Synnecor group will duel with the locals for the first time, an old rivalry will be revived with M.I.T., who missed Trinity by 14-13 last season.

Frosh Cagers

To Oppose WPI

to date, Coach Shultz's frosh team has an 0-2 record, having dropped its first two encounters. In each game, it was a combination of bad luck and team inexperience which counted for the defeat.

This Saturday, the Bantams will play away, taking on the Worcester FVA.

Last Saturday, the frosh went up to Cambridge to take on a strong M.I.T. squad. The M.I.T. Frosh had combination new defense and complete man-defense. They would fall back down court, setting up a zone defense. As soon as the Trinity cagers began to move the ball in, the M.I.T. Frosh had confronted them with a man-to-man defense. Combining this with a weak defense on their own part, the Frosh lost to M.I.T. 75-66.

However, the game was not a complete loss as Fox and Horbowski were able to collect 21 and 19 points respectively.

The game on Friday was a much different story. Here, the locals were faced by one of the toughest opponents they will see all year. The Brown team was, in all respects, a much superior team, and they were quite surprised to see a Trinity team only three points behind them at the half.

Though Brown was able to win with a 65-66 score, the Trinity frosh team made the prospects and get some idea of the ability of everyone on the squad. While many of the players have little or no squash experience, the play of the team has impressed with great interest being shown by all these others.

Duth has made up a tentative list as follows:

1. Bob Meehan
2. Rick Pranctl
3. Rod Day
4. Pete Herbruck
5. Jim Cool

First match of the season has been scheduled January 5th against Wesleyan at home.

PLAYOFFS

Frosh Squash Team

Prep for Debut

This year, Bantam takes over an International squash coach. On November 15th the first tryouts were held for the freshmen. Out of the 16 who turned out on the first day, Coach Duth selected 12 to carry on the squad.

After the first few practices, matches were played every day and scores posted on the draw sheet. This gave Duth a chance to look over the prospects and get some idea of the ability of everyone on the squad.

While many of the players have little or no squash experience, the play of the team has impressed with great interest being shown by all these others.

THE TRINITY TRIPOD

Cagers Face Williams Here Tuesday; Cromwell Nets 29 in Win Over MIT

The Trinity basketball team repeated a last-minute MIT rally to post a 60-26 win over the Bantams Tuesday afternoon. The game was held at the new $151,511,000 Mandell Fieldhouse with a reading of 3,415.

Sophomore Ken Cromwell, with 29 points in the M.I.T. game, scored more points than any other player since '56.

SCHAEFER BROTHER CO.

THE SECRET LIFE OF GORDON WITTY

It was a sixty-seven-yard kick, at a bad angle, into the wind. A field goal would mean the game, and a Rose Bowl bid. Anxiously teammates clustered around Gordon Witty in the huddle. "Can you do it? They asked. Gordon Witty squinted downfield, where the slim white goal posts framed a flaming red Schaefer beer sign on the low wall beyond. "Gentlemen," he smiled, calmly adjusting his helmet, "I can hit the "S" in Schaefer from here with either foot!"

"Stop kicking pebbles!" Mrs. Witty said. "You're scuffing up your new shoes!" Gordon stared at his wife as if he had never seen her before. Then, sighing, he followed her into the supermarket. The shopping cart got he needed fixation: it went wicket, wicket, wickets as he wheeled it past a display of toy jet planes and over to the Schaefer shelves. He put a six-pack in the cart.

He listened idly to the wicket, wicket, wickets of the guns defending the airmen outside. "It's M.I.G. Alley for me again tonight, lad. They say my jet needs fixing, but then what doesn't?"

He drained his glass and smashed it against the fireplace. Gordon stared at the broken jar of pickles on the floor. "Now you've done it!" his wife screamed, coming up behind him and making him jump. "I'll pay the man," he said softly, "I'll pay."

In the checkout line Mrs. Witty hurried away to get an item she'd forgotten. Gordon stood quietly staring at a rack of TV magazines... The red light flashed on two cameras. Smiling, forever indomitable, he raised his glass in a carefree toast, and said, "Good evening, viewers. This is Gordon Witty, speaking for Schaefer beer.

Crest, Peabody & Co., Inc.
Annual Student Conference at West Point

Two Trinity seniors have recently returned from the 19th Annual Microphone Conference on U.S. Affairs, held at the military academy at West Point from December 3-4. The men are Owen T. Smith and Howard Hurwitz, who were appointed by President Junga to represent Trinity at the banquet. The topic discussed was "The Strengthened Millions," the reference being to the vast numbers of people who remain uncommitted in the cold war between the Western powers and the Soviet bloc.

The central agreement reached at the conference was that there is a great need for the democracies to understand the uncommitted peoples and that this understanding is not to be had by our force feeding them with our ideas and methods. Many delegations felt that the U.S. has lost friends abroad by occasionally displaying high-handed attitudes.

A year or two from now, the same conference would prove valuable in foreign policy.
