Background of Hartford Politics Toned Corruption

By PETER S. ANDERSON

Unknown to the bulk of the Trinity Student body, there is going on in Hartford right now a most interesting city election.

The background is this. In 1946 a large group who called themselves the Citizens Charter Committee succeeded in getting the state and Democratic form of government dropped in favor of a "Council-Manager" or "Chartorial" form.

Dr. Barber to Speak

Tomorrow on observance of the 200th anniversary of Handel's death, Dr. Barber will sponsor an illustrated lecture at the Hartford Trinity Library, the Hartford College Choir, professional soloists and samples to illustrate his lecture.

Teachers of Italian To Meet at Center

Some twenty old Trinity science majors journeyed last Friday to mid-Langdon to tour this government endowed atomic research center. Sigma Pi Ithlin, Trinity's honorary physics society sponsored the trip.

Library Partition

In the fall, the college will add to the number of Trinity songs the books, articles, and documents of our country's colleges and universities.

For Professor Shortage Reported

Society of college professors united with the law of supply and demand has increased the value of teachers in both "public esteem and price tags," Fred Rockinger reported in the October 31 issue of The New York Times.

A new edition of the Trinity College Student will be prepared in the next few weeks, a number of the songs the books, articles, and documents of our country's colleges and old and new favorites for class singing.

If you like the present book, let us know about it, and ask for a membership in the society of college professors.

"A history as interesting as the songs they sing . . ."

Minstrels; Seraffyn, Cherubim Will Entertain in Hamlin Hall

Through the efforts of the Senate Entertainment Committee, Trinity has been fortunate enough to enlist the services of Seraffyn and Cherubim, "America's only band and wife team who will appear Thursday, November 29, at 9:15.

The couple has a history as musical and mystical as the songs they sing. They have wandered all over Europe and America, singing and collecting new folk songs as they go. When they are at their best, they travel mainly on foot and often sequester food and lodging by singing for the paying guests at their local inns and hotels wherever they happen to be. Seraffyn strums his famous lute, Bouzesoph, and usually provides the background for his wife, Cherubim.

Proposes Five Languages

Seraffyn himself speaks five languages, and the rarest in a couple whom they do not speak. Their songs originated in places like Ireland, Wales, Germany, Denmark, and China, as well as areas in the United States such as the Appalachian Mountains, the West and even New England.

Truly, they are a well-traveled couple, and their singing is indicative of the spirit in which their songs were written.

Today's performance is free, and everyone is welcome.

Library to Show Rare Books

An exhibition of predominately early Renaissance printing compiled from the collection in the Watkinson Library will be held today and tomorrow in the Trumbull room of the library.

The exhibition is the first in a series to be sponsored by Watkinson Library to further acquaint the public with the vast resources available in this large research and reference collection. Highlights of the exhibition are early editions of Italian Renaissance writings and early printed books on early science include works by Copernicus, Pardanis, Agrippa, Agricola, Vesalius, Brach, several 17th century editions of Bacon, as well as the first American "Project Awareness" at Dartmouth College. "To draw the attention of students at universities and colleges . . .", is the topic to be discussed.

"WE'RE LISTENING, TRINITY"

Apologies for years has been an overworked word in the editorial columns of the Tripod, but it appears that this year it is upon us in even larger amounts. The college is every bit as apathetic as the fraternity situation. Apparently everyone on campus is intentionally ignoring the problems of the institutions of which the Trinity student is a member.

We refer in part to the lack of expression regarding tripods. In the days of past editors the crisis in the faculty was more than apathy, however. It is a complete disregard for the existence of the student body as a whole. The Tripod saves for the brother of one fraternity member. In the pages of the Tripod we find the voices of students, but not the views of the student body. When students have something to express, they are not heard. The lack of freedom in the college is evident.

"PARKING AT A PREMIUM"

After a study of the parking rules listed in this issue, the Tripod editorial board has come to the conclusion that they are ambiguous, incomplete, and inapplicable. Not only do they fail to effectively define Summit Street parking regulations, but they also neglect the fact that parking space at Trinity is a premium, and that the lakefront and Chapel lots are empty at times, especially on weekdays.

An informal Monday evening count revealed seven cars parked on Summit Street in no parking zones. On the basis of past observation, it is evident that this figure is usually much higher during class hours. Every day numerous cars illegitimately use Summit Street without penalty, and constant repetition of this leads one to believe that the zones are not currently being enforced. Either the student parking rules are not enforced, or it fails to utilize it, for the silence is quite noticeable.

In conclusion, we maintain that our comments on the charges it has made against the parking system, then we will assume that they are either correct or incorrect, and will be eagerly awaiting news of the needed changes.
